

EOI: Research Masters/PhD Opportunities Aboriginal health and wellbeing

Are you an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person interested in obtaining a higher degree? A generous scholarship is now available from The School of Population Health and UNSW for a Masters or PhD in Aboriginal ageing.

We are seeking expressions of interest from candidates to undertake Masters by Research (MRes), Masters in Philosophy (MPhil) or a Doctor of Philosophy (PhD). There are a several potential research topics open including:

- Factors impacting implementation and scale up of a co-designed community-based falls prevention and healthy ageing program for Aboriginal people, the Ironbark Program.
- Identifying and prioritising Aboriginal healthy ageing research needs

Why study with us?

We have generous tax-free scholarships available for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander higher degree students – providing support up to $60,000 pa, and a strong team of Aboriginal academics to provide cultural and professional support.

You will have the opportunity to engage in high quality research under the guidance of expert researchers and supervisors. Our School is strongly committed to excellence in learning, teaching and research to enhance public health and health services. We provide quality learning that is student-centred and relevant to real-world practice.

Who we are looking for

If you are an Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander person with an undergraduate degree in public health, allied health, social sciences, medical/health sciences, psychology, or related field, or Honours degree, and have experience working with Aboriginal communities contact us now!

This position is open to Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander applicants only (pursuant to section 126 of the Anti-Discrimination Act 1977 (NSW)). The exemption was sought for this position to designate and recruit professional and academic positions for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander persons only, to fulfil UNSW's goal of a representative workforce rate.
